This is a modern take on the classic DDR2 memory module. Instead of the old-school 54 pin connector, the module has a 72 pin connector. Note: Modules with 77 pin connectors will be phased out in a few months. The setup of this is recommended if you want the best experience. The modules you use should match the frequency of your processor. The DDR2 frequency has 2-bit chips in between, which means that the memory frequency (speed) is only one byte higher than the processor. Most DDR2 memory modules use 4-bit chips
